

Student Loan Payments Are Back — Are You Ready?

Federal student loan payments have officially resumed, but 62% of borrowers haven't started repaying. Credit reporting for missed payments is underway, forced collections began May 5, and wage garnishments are next.

If you or a family member has student loans—or are thinking about borrowing for yourself or a dependent—don't miss this free, expert-led webinar series. Learn what's changed, what's at stake, and how to protect your finances. Reserve your spot today.

Behind on Student Loans? Options and Key Steps to Take Right Now

June 17 @ 10 a.m. PST / 1 p.m. EST

- » What happens when your student loan is delinquent or in default
- » How Treasury Offset and wage garnishment impact your paycheck
- » What to expect as collections resume
- » Practical steps to get out of default
- » Proven strategies to prevent default in the future

Public Service Loan Forgiveness: Latest Rules, Eligibility, Pay Plans & Process

June 19 @ 9 a.m. PST / 12 p.m. EST

- » Current options to minimize your student loan obligations
- » Application updates for income-driven repayment plans
- » Eligibility requirements to achieve Public Service Loan Forgiveness

This session is applicable to employees of non-profits only

Student Loan Debt Check-Up: Current Options and Action Steps

June 24 @ 10 a.m. PST / 1 p.m. EST

- » Current options to minimize your student loan obligations
- » Application updates for income-driven repayment plans
- » Resources and 1:1 help available to you and your family members

College Funding Options for Parents: FAFSA, Best Loan Types and More

June 26 @ 9 a.m. PST / 12 p.m. EST

- » Tradeoffs of the most common funding options and student loan types
- » Important facts to know about Parent PLUS
- » Tips on the FAFSA
- » Resources and 1:1 help available to you and your family members

RESERVE YOUR SPOT!

Additional resources available through your Tuition.io account

Expert guidance on repayment strategies, default recovery, and loan forgiveness programs

1:1 coaching for personalized support via email or scheduled phone conversations